Project Description

Submit a description of your proposed research that includes as many of the following subsections as are relevant to your project and discipline. Be sure to make your description accessible and intelligible to those not of your discipline. Proposals should not exceed four (4) pages inclusive of references.

- a) Abstract: In 100 words or fewer, describe the primary research questions, methods, and expectations.
  - b) Project description: Summarize the main issue to be addressed by the research.
  - c) Literature: Provide a brief account of the most relevant literature or extant genealogical databases/products informing your research.
  - d) Methods, research questions, and/or hypotheses: Articulate the questions or hypotheses to be addressed and the primary methods you will use to explore them.
  - e) Expected research outcomes and circulation venues: Briefly describe the products (e.g. publications, presentations) and public (online) accessibility you anticipate will come from this research.
  - f) Anticipated impacts: How do you see your research adding to the larger genealogical community and the academic approach to genealogical projects?

Outcomes
